Selma High, Harrison yearbooks digitized

The Selma News • Thu, Sep 11, 2014

Many Johnston County high school pre-1970 yearbooks, including many of Selma High School and Richard B. Harrison High School, are viewable online.

Through a project with the North Carolina Digital Heritage Center, housed at UNC's Wilson Library, about 150 yearbooks from the Johnston County Heritage Center's collections are now available at the Digital NC website.

Todd Johnson, director of the Heritage Center, said the center is interested in getting old yearbooks so they can be scanned and shared with others. He said persons owning yearbooks that are missing from the web site can loan them to the Heritage Center.

"Yearbooks may be loaned," said Johnson, "and rest assured they will be given the utmost care and returned promptly."

To view the digitized yearbooks, go to: digitalnc.org/collections/yearbooks.
